You’re invited to join us for this inaugural event on physician wellness!

Mark your calendar. Hosted by Stanford University School of Medicine in collaboration with the American Medical Association and the Mayo Clinic, the first-ever American Conference on Physician Health will take place this fall!

Featuring an impressive faculty of thought leaders, including former Surgeon General Vivek Murthy, MD, this unique conference will focus on inspiring organizations and health systems to seek ways to put the joy back in medicine for our nation’s physicians.

With its theme of “Creating an organizational foundation to achieve joy in medicine,” this conference is ideal for those who seek:

- A guiding framework and toolkit for organizations to prevent physician burnout and help individuals achieve personal fulfillment
- Updates regarding innovative research, measurement tools and interventions for addressing an organization’s culture of wellness, efficiency of practice and personal resilience
- Insights from organizations that have successfully improved their physicians’ health and supported personal resilience
- Effective strategies to measure wellness in an organization and to make wellness a strategic priority

Don’t miss out on the latest research and strategies to promote better physician health and well-being. Visit http://cme.stanford.edu/acph for more information, or email stanfordcme@stanford.edu to receive conference updates.
